Frivolous Christmas fun: At Hamburg's naughtiest Christmas market Santa Pauli, it's not only the mulled wine that gets the visitors hot. Live music, the fireplace lounge on the winter deck and a strip tent are a temptation to naughty and frivolous merriment on a Christmas market stroll on Spielbudenplatz on the Reeperbahn. The market keeps opening hours late into the night, in keeping with its special location on the Reeperbahn. Christmas à la Reeperbahn The most unbridled Christmas market of the lovely Hanseatic city not only guarantees conventional Christmas market stands, but also offers an open-air art gallery and Sunday TEENren's programme - fun for young and old alike. For those who fancy mulled wine, the winter deck is the place to be. The cosy bar with a blazing fireplace provides visitors with the Christmas drinks they desire. The over-18s fir forest, set up in the manner of the Reeperbahn, offers strip shows as well as frivolous and crackling erotic readings. Christmas market in St. Pauli Whether on your own, with family or friends- Santa Pauli has something to offer everyone! At Hamburg's coolest Christmas market, there is no distinction between Christmas tradition and frivolous Kiez live. Santa Pauli attracts crowds with its live music on stage and hot angles in the Santa Pauli strip tent. An the beaches in between, there is everything that should be at a Kiez Christmas market. Considered one of

Hamburg's most authentic Christmas markets, the streets are filled with traditional wooden huts selling gifts, culinary treats (Lebkuchen for the win), gluhwein and roasted almonds. There are also wonderful street performers adding to the jovial spirit, so we recommend spending a few hours here and soaking up the Christmas spirit (by that, we mean hot chocolate with spirits and whipped cream, obv's). Heidelberg Christmas Market opened on November 18, with various stalls spread throughout the old town. One major attraction is the Heidelberg Barrel, a gigantic wooden structure housing a sales booth and small viewing platform. Heidelberg's Karlsplatz also boasts an ice rink. The 3G rule (vaccinated, recovered, tested) applies everywhere. Mulled wine only for vaccinated at some German Christmas markets. Some German Christmas markets open amid COVID uncertainty. Winter Pride opens its pink doors once again this year, and with its convivial atmosphere and an entertaining weekend programme attracts many visitors to St. Georg. Weihnachtsmarkt an der Apostelkirche Bei der Apostelkirche 2 20257 Hamburg. 11PM After a few too many mulled wines, head back to the Reeperbahn and one of the many backstreet bars for a cocktail or four. We recommend trying a Gin Basil Smash, a delightful mix of gin, basil, lemon juice and sugar syrup, which was perfected right here in Hamburg. There are a heap of clubs to visit if you're keen to boogie on, ranging from rock to techno, punk to funk - and all with a super welcoming, fun vibe. [If you'd like to explore the Reeperbahn with a local who knows all its secrets, you could also join this adults-only guided tour of the Reeperbahn district (includes a drink and a shot too!). Back at Munich's Marienplatz, the bells of the famous gloc. Unfortunately, Couto will have to come back another time. This year, the traditional Christmas market has been called off because of the coronavirus pandemic. All that remains are the wooden market stands, shuttered and waiting to be taken away for happier times. Some are still decorated with crimson Christmas balls or lonely fir branches. In normal times, as many as 3 million people would flock to the market in the buildup to Christmas, buying presents and warming their hands on delicious mulled wine. 3PM Lunch will be late, be it's definitely worth it. Located down a hidden alleyway lies ZweiPunktNull (Two Point Zero), a hip restaurant with incredible wood-fired pizza lifted straight from Naples. We recommend everything because, pizza. Wash it down with a Ratsherrn, Hamburg's best local beer (we're calling it!). Visa SEPA Paypal Mastercard Immediate bank transfer Amazon. We use cookies to improve our service for you. Such segregation is the latest example of new rules introduced in Germany that aim to contain a fourth coronavirus wave without imposing a blanket lockdown. Some companies are also creating separate areas in canteens for the vaccinated. The rules also aim to encourage the unvaccinated to get a shot, given Germany has one of the lowest vaccination rates in western Europe at 67% and is reporting record high infections. "There have to be access restrictions," said Marion Begas as she set up her pottery stand at the Hamburg market, which will have 40% fewer stalls this year to ensure greater social distancing. "It is a way to protect everyone." Germany's famous Christmas markets, suspended last year due to the pandemic, must now comply with strict safety rules that vary from state to state and are constantly changing. As infections increase and intensive wards in hospitals fill up, there are growing doubts over whether Christmas markets should be held at all this year. "I find it completely perverse," said Hamburg resident Bencke Brorhilker. Munich's Christkindlmarkt became on Tuesday the biggest market yet to be ditched. The fourth wave is hitting southern and eastern Germany - with the lowest vaccination rates - particularly hard. "The dramatic situation in our clinics and the exponentially rising infection numbers leave me no choice," Mayor Dieter Reiter told Bavarian radio. TRAIN Hamburg is a major destination within Germany, so it's serviced by major trains daily. If you're travelling from London, the journey ranges from 8 - 14 hours, connecting via Brussels and Cologne before ending in Hamburg. All trains arrive into Hamburg Hauptbahnhof. Schöttl comes from a family with a long history of working the Christmas market stands. "My grandmother used to say: 'Always put something aside!'" he says. "And I have to say, this time things are getting very tight. Very tight indeed." Take a look at the beta version of dw.com. We're not done yet! Your opinion can help us make it better. Entrance of the historical and romantic christmas market. Frivolous Christmas fun: At Hamburg's naughtiest Christmas market Santa Pauli, it's not only the mulled wine that gets the visitors hot. Christian Schöttl's stand at the Munich Christkindlmarkt usually sees plenty of visitors. HWWI and Chamber of Commerce present latest economic figures. 8PM Next, move on to Altes Madchen beer house in Sternschanze - a cosy, modern beer hall, with delicious food and a truly incredible selection of beers (it is Germany after all). We recommend trying the beer paddle to sample a range of their beers, and balancing it out with the fish and chips. Buy and sell things locally on Facebook Marketplace.
